About Ubuntu Storytellers

Denise Keyes Page, the founder of Ubuntu storytellers, explains that the South African word "Ubuntu" means "I am because you are". It describes a quality that includes the essential human virtues of compassion and humanity. Through storytelling we create deeper connections, and build empathy and trust.

"We tell stories. Stories of 'being' and of being in the black and brown skin we're in," explains Denise Keyes Page. "Stories that engage and open our collective hearts. Stories that deepen our empathy and inspire us to be different, to make a difference."

Share in memories of "SUMMERTIME" by experiencing captivating stories that will engage your heart and fire your imagination. The stories are performed by professional story artists who invite you into a slice of their life.

They reflect ways of being that have been passed down intentionally or cellularity from family members who have come before. The ancestors. They are stories of the many ways we are loved in our black and brown communities. They are not lectures or historical reenactments. They are lived stories told from the heart. Shared artistically, authentically and vulnerably with you.
